PRESIDENT WILSON'S POLICY.

No radical changes are expected as a result of the re-election of Woodrow-Wilson as President of the United States. It is understood that the President will recommend to Congress that the tariff be revised after the war, action to be taken on the recommendation of the tariff commission that will make an ex-haustive study of the entire situation. Apart from this there are no changes of great importance forecast up to the SUPER-ZEPPELIN NEWS FROM HOME. SECRETS.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

LONDON, Oct. 20. WOMEN MUSICIANS.

The male musicians engaged at the various theatres controlled by Mr. Oswald Stoll have had a disagreeable surprise. They suddenly struck -- about 1,500 of them-for more pay on the ground of war expense, but Mr. Stoll contended that he was paying as much mi and in some cases more thang his gas-bags down. competitors; so he declined the advance. Then he just went shead and engaged woman, and told the men they had enper Zeppelin 1.33, which resigned and the women had been engaged permanently. The men are now trying to persuade him they are out on strike and desire to negotiate, but he firmly tells them he has a full permanent staff of women, and the matter is closed so far as hegis concerned ... The women are receiving the same pay as the menand a little less in the auburbs.

OUR HUN FIRMS.

It seems ludicrous, but we have still German firms doing business under controllers against whom windingup orders were issued as long ago as March last. There is Bechstein, the piano firm. Wahliss, the china shop, and a number of others. Apparently most of the delay, but some very lively newspaper compaigning has resulted in orders being given for the selling of the various concerns by auction.

Lieut.-Col. Page Croft, M.P., who has come back from the front to agitate for votes for soldiers, is also taking a hand in this outery. There is growing anxiety, he says; at the way Ministers have hesitated in acting on the lines of the Paris resolution at the meeting of the Allies Committees have been appointed; and as they consist of gentlemen every economic faith they can effect only long debates. It is action that is required; for did not the last resolution of the Paris Conference declars in the plainest terms that the policy then laid down should be put into effect by the Allied Governments. Looking at the way things are going, he declares there is grave danger of our own action being too late, so he appeals to all patriotic Britons to aid the Tariff Reform League to fight pro-German trade sentiment.

Mr. Gordon Harvey, M.P., for Rochdale, and other Lancashire men are being secused of pro-German sentiment in this trade matter and Manchester is roundly asserted to be averse-to German agents in China being wound up too sharply, because they have been dealing with their piece goods through German houses in many cases in the Far East. There has been some very bitter talk on"this head of late.

Lt.-Col. Page Croft himself says: "Naturally we are first of all paying attention to Lancashire, where this insidious anti-patriotic agitation was started. We shall have to fight the notion too that prohibition and not a scientific tariff is the way to show the national distrust of the German and the national abborrence of his ways and works. Prohibition is different from, and radically opposed: to? the policy of the Paris Conference, and would in no way assist our Allies; it is repugnant to all the Standing by the wreck we can recorstruct the scene aloft as the vessel (she is 680ft. long and 72ft. in diameter, or rather larger in bulk than the Lusitania) whisled through the air to attack our British women and children at a speed of some 65 miles an hour-for nights were usually chosen when no wind was blowing and her engines will propel her at that speed in a calm. The work of navigation is carried out from the forward gondola which was of largessize, 80th or so long. This gondola was made of stoualuminium and in appearance closely resembled a covered in boat, though from the weight of the machinery inside it i would not have floated.

It was divided into three compartments. In the first was the captain, right in the bows of the ship, looking through non-flammable calluloid windows, which were pierced through the cotton fabric that closed the gondola in above. Conveniently placed for him were two wheels to operate the elevating and horizontal steering rudders, and other wheels controlling the water ballset and the petrol tanks. Before him was a little keyboard with which murder was done. It showed sixty small buttons, like the pushes of an electric bell each of which operated. one bemb-dropping book and released bomb. This fatigue after slight exertion or following a meal is an indication of weak digestion or amemia. These troubles often go together, acting and reacting on each other; so that a state of indigestion implies a condition of anomia, and anomia accompanies indigestion.

Acting on this knowledge the intelli-gent reader will adopt a blood-tonic treatment for indigestion, debility and anemia, such as Dr. Williams' pink pills, and will see the wisdom of the treatment as it proceeds. 1,440 HORSE POWER. Thus this ship has six propellers, in all and engines of 1,440 h.p., as against four propellers and engines of 540 h.p. in the first naval Zeppelin. The propellers were connected with the engines by aluminium shafting, which seemed to be of great strength. But a large piece of one shaft broke away from this ship and fell at a distance of three miles." Whether it was through damage from gun-fire is not certain, but the airship showed marks of hits and seemed to have been struck on her petrol tanks.

No observation car for lowering was found, but it is possible that if she carried one it was thrown overboard shortly before she landed, as she made an effort to proceed to sea and did go some little distance out before returning and making her landing. The reason she came down was presumably that the breaking of this shaft and loss of petrol made it impossible for her to cross the North Sen. She threw out omeny objects. including most of her guns.

The gas was contained in 24 ballonets each connected by a valve with a central gas-supply pipe. The ballonets were burnt, but enough of the fabric remains to show that it was of a thin silk or cotton, water, and gas-proofed. They were separated, not, as some have supposed, by sheet aluminium bulk-heads. hut by spider-webs of wire, a web between each pair of ballonets. The gas capacity was 2 million cubic feet, pearly thrice that of the first naval Zeppetin, and the total weight in the air 50 tons, of which 9 tons was aluminium framing. Of this the weight of bombs would probably be 11 to 2 tons; the petrol tanks could contain 2,000 gallons. A mark on one of them gave the date of the ship. It read

WOMEN IN THE WAR LABOUR MARKET.

758,000 MEN REPLACED.

The July figures resulting from the monthly inquiries conducted by the Employment Department of the Board CLEANLINESS IN USE of Trade of the increase in the employment of women and of the replacement of men by women throughout the country are now available. Altogether 866,000 ECONOMY additional women (or 27 per cent. of those employed in 1914) had been drawn into various occupations up to the month | EFFICIENCY of July, 766,000 of them directly replacing mon. It is no secret that the figures for the next quarters will be better still, and that the recruiting ground of this new women's labour army is not yet exhausted. We are informed, too, that there is still need for more women in industrial occupations. There are such occupations as nursing the sick and wounded, small dressmaking establishments, and domestic service Returns of women engaged in nursing the wounded are only available to the end of May, 1916, and since then have of course, largely increased. Then the total was 30,000. Of these, roughly, 9,000 were employed by the War Office. Admiralty, or in Territorial General Hospitals; 21,000 by the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John, of whom 10,000 were voluntary workers. The number of women engaged in an occupation is no guide to the number of women who replace men; a firm working with a reduced staff would replace men -with-some-of-its-existing-female-staff, without engaging other women; while a firm on war work engaging a large number of new women hands might not employ any on processes which in prewar days would have been done by men. The gross increase in the number of women employed in industrial occupations since July, 1914, is 362,000, but of these 263,000 only are replacing men; the figures of increase in the number of women employed and replacement of men are, however, identical in professional occupations, agriculture, transport (not municipal), and arsenals and dockyards, which means that no fresh women were taken on in any of these cccupations to do work that would ordinarily be done by women. There are no industries in which some form of direct substitution has not taken place, and few in which it is not increasing.

DOMESTIC SERVICE UNPOPULAR.

Broadly speaking, the educated woman is to be found in the groups concerned with munitions and clerical work. She has chosen what appealed to her patriotism, and discarded for the most part those forms of work which might bring her more personal wealth in the future. The vast amount of industrial substitution has been achieved by women who have been accustomed to work, and few employers find much difficulty in "replacing their men. Domestic service, for which no exact figures are available, may be taken to be the most unpopular form of feminine employment since the war began. decline in laundry work, dressmaking, confectionery, printing and bookbinding, linen, lace, and silk; in all these groups, however, some women are directly replacing men. In the cotton industry 25,000 women 8,000 to 18,000. In those trades in prepared by the Home Office and the Board of Trade on the substitution of women, a considerable amount of new replacement is going on.

" " STRANGE TASKS FOR WOMEN. The figures available for inclusion in the September returns, which will probably be ready before the beginning of the New Year, will show some interesting further developments of the replacement problem. There are women employed on the Tyne as blacksmiths strikers: they are at the fires doing tool fettling and light blacksmith's work and at the power hammer. Women are loading and discharging trucks and weighing material in a sulphur and copper works and in timber yards they are moulding and turning and carrying timber from the trucks. In a motor garage they are washing cars and changing and removing tires. number of women are employed in a speech acknowledging the gift of sheet from works making gunpowder portrait of his daughter said : There are kegs. They do all the work-making so many heroes in this conflict that it is Chinese themselves who are to blame, methodical advance of the French against, the kegs, painting, and packing almost impossible in dispatches them. For another firm they are loading pieric seid, cleaning the nitrating house, filling and emptying whizzer, and drying and sieving. In a gunpowder factory they are at work on small cordite presses with mon overseers work which some firms had definitely stated they could not do. The corporations of Hastings and Brighton have momen as chair-attendants and in scientific workshop women are not engaged in assembling the parts harometers and compasses. Times.

A NATION OF HEROES.

Mr. Lloyd George in the course of enumerate them there are so many deeds of valour. It is incredible, the devotion, the valour, and the endurance of these gallant men at the front. have given ourage a new meaning, they have given is a new standard, were rating it means something different, it means more than it ever means before. We never understood the word until the story of this war burst, upon tis. We never knew, not that among us we had a man here and a man there who had heart of gold and was capable of daring and interprise, who had valour firing his soul; but that we had thousands, my, labour and of toil. (Cheers.) mytinds of them spread all over the land in the highest and in the humblest homes that is the revolution of this war. (Cheers.) A treasure, an inerhans ble new pride in the land that has produced so many myriada of hecoes. We had thought these qualities were qualities of the great, of the select; but they are all such great things, and I agree with the very simely word vittered by Miss Pennant that, if we can do such things in war, we can also do them in peace. (Cheers.) Peace has its sucrifices. Peace demands valour, peace demands devotion, and it will be an unutberable Insanity if the lesson which this war has taught us of the possibilities of our people in unity, in sacrifice for a common end, in devotion to the cause of a common humanity, and of our common country; should be lost when the flag has been brought back triumphant from the field of battle, and planted on the field of

BRITONS AND NATIONAL RECENERATION.

PREMIER.

The Commonwealth Prime Minister (Mr.W. M. Hughes) in a series of three articles in the "Sunday Herald," makes a stirring appeal to all classes to combine in making a new and happier Britain after the war. The first article includes a vivid comparison between Britain peace and Britain in war time: Hughes says that he sees the sun-lit peaks of a New England, where the peli starved children. He continues:-"It will be the verdict of the world that the British people their trial. They have done wonders, though I feel that they might have done much more. The war will not add anything to the British character, but there will be a radical change in their outlook upon life. The Briton now sees every thing in a clearer and softer, light." is at once humbled and exalted, contrito and proud, if ashamed of his former narneighbours and his country. "If he pales as he looks down the pit which so nearly engulfed him, the Briton as he contemplates the soil or we country, now clearly visible. Some Britons have no vision, and still wear the blinkers of self-interest. These dread a change. These seekers of pelf and creatures of routine hope, when the madness of war has died down, that all will be as it was. They hope that Britain will grasp the palm of her would-be murderer and again be willing to be the host of the foul parasite. They will welcome the German trader, greedily absorb the products of murderers and 18. Temporary commissions will be nourish a ain the cancer which was eating the very vitals of the Empire. The death-knell has been rung on that: England which mumbled, 'Lord, Lord, but abased itself unashamed before the golden calf, which made wealth, nor worth, the standard whereby men would be measured. For nearly a century Britain had what men call peace broken. only by the distant rumblings of war, which hardly reached the ears of the great mass of the people, fighting despurately for the means to live. Now they had had two years of war, and despite the frightful horrors it had brought to all save the negligible few. there was a great exaltation of soul and peace of mind.

Mr Hughes continues :- "The old days

"A people who had been divided among themselves had become united an Empire that had seemed little more than a name had become a great and living reality. The people of Britain, are like men with vision awaried and stunted, by a long dwelling in a thick fog, upon whom burst a great hurricane sweeping away miasmic vapours and resalvation. This supreme lesson of the war, if laid hold of and applied, will regenerate not only Britain but the civilised world. In the purifying and ennobling effect of great ideals lies the hope of mankind. Patriotism is the great ideal. The war has invoked patriotism and rease need not levit to patriotism, and peace need not lay it to rest. The nation for whom millions of brave men have offered their lives must consecrate itself to the great work of making itself worthy of them. We own

FUTURE ARMY COMMISSIONS.

An important change in the system of the selection and training of officers for permanent commissions in the army has just been announced by the War Office. Before the war candidates for Woolwich and Sandhurst had to be between the ages of 171 and 184. When war broke out Lord Kitchener not only raised the upper age limit to 25, but swept away most of the fees payable at the Royal Military Academy and the Royal Military College. HONGKONG TIDES.

The tide-table given below has been compiled at the National Almanac Office London from the result of the analysis Mr E. Millar. Mrs H. St. Clair Knox. of observations taken by means of an automatic tide-recording machine in the Water Police Basin at Tsim Sha Tsui during the years 1887-8-9.

The zero of the table corresponds with the zero of the sounding in the Admiralty

Chart, which has beer found to be 4 feet 3 inches below mean sea level. To obtain the depth of water on the tide gauge at the Victoria Naval Yard add 3 feet 4 inches, and on the gauge af Lamont Dock, Aberdeen, add 10 feet

4 inches to the height given in the table.
